

REVIVE RUMORS OF EARLY BREAK IN CASH KIDNAP CASE

Twenty G-Men in Two Automobiles Speed to Ft. Lauderdale Early Today

AT BACK BAY SECTION

Believe Activity Due To An Entirely New Development In the Investigation

MIAMI, Fla., June 4—(INS)—Approximately 20 G-men in two automobiles sped to Ft. Lauderdale, about 15 miles from here, early today, on a mysterious mission which immediately revived rumors of an early break in the kidnapping of 5½-year-old James Bailey Cash, Jr.

From Ft. Lauderdale, it was reported the Federal agents were concentrating on the "back bay" region two miles south of that city, a vast swamp area which contains some 500 small, uninhabited islands suitable for a criminal hide-out.

It could not be learned whether J. Edgar Hoover, F. B. I. chief, was among the men rushed to Ft. Lauderdale. Hoover had retired early and all attempts to reach him failed. Hotel employees said he had left orders not to be disturbed.

There is enough water in the "back bay" swamps to permit a search by launches and power boats and it appeared certain that boats would be used in any attempt to search the islands.

The few Federal men who left here, as well as police, could not or would not explain the activity at Ft. Lauderdale.

It seemed certain, however, that the early morning activity resulted from an entirely new development in the investigation, for before he retired, Hoover conferred with his men, then old reporters:

Nominate Officers For The American Legion Auxiliary

Thirty-five members of American Legion Auxiliary gathered in the Robert W. Bracken Post home, last evening, for the June business meeting. Mrs. Robert Downing presiding.

Among the reports given was one by Mrs. Gowen that 1600 poppies were sold by Auxiliary members this season; report of 81 paid-up members by Mrs. Harry Lessig; report by Mrs. Benjamin Lessig of $23.25 cleared on card party benefitting the Legion minor baseball team; statement by Mrs. Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., that marks had been placed on graves of eight deceased members on Memorial Day; and the purchase of two dozen steel chairs for use in the Auxiliary room was told. The Auxiliary also plans to have screens made for the entire second floor of the Post home.

Mrs. Benjamin Ahart gave an account of the bi-county council meeting Auxiliaries held in Glenside. The organization also plans to purchase a medal to be presented to the Bensalem Township girl who secured second place in the ninth district essay contest. For the Valley Forge picnic for invalid veterans, the Auxiliary will donate $7 and provide paper plates for the tables.

The June card party will be on the 10th, with Mrs. Thomas Livesey in charge. This will be in the post home. Nomination of officers also took place last evening, with the following nominated: Mrs. Benjamin Lessig, president; Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., and Mrs. Henry Nyse, 1st and 2nd vice-presidents, respectively; Mrs. Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., secretary; Miss Emily Acken, treasurer; Mrs. Dorothy Schenberger, historian; Mrs. Harold Dettmer, chairman; Mrs. Thomas Vessey and Mrs. Henry Johnson, sergeants-at-arms.

SAIL FOR ENGLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Meredith, of the Quakertown Free Press, left Wednesday noon for a trip to England and Wales. Their itinerary includes a week at Stratford, at the Memorial Theatre, to hear eight Shakespearean plays, followed by a visit to Welshpool, Wales, where the Meredith family came from in 1768. They sailed from New York on the ship Washington, and will be gone about three weeks.

Hold Two Captains In Probe of Spy Ring

NEW YORK, June 4—Two captains of German vessels and a German-born draftsman in a shipyard building naval vessels were held as material witnesses yesterday after testifying before the Federal Grand Jury probing the spy ring.

Captain Heinrich Lorenz of the S. S. Hindenburg, a freighter and passenger ship of the Hamburg-American Line, was chief officer on the Europa at the time Johanna Hofmann, ship's hairdresser, was arrested on espionage charges.

Captain Franz Friske, of the S. S. Chemnitz, of the North German Lloyd line, was first officer on the Hamburg on which Werner Gudenberg fled the country last week.

Assistant Federal Attorney Dunnigan pointed out that both men were due to sail for Germany last night. Both had testified, he said, and both possess material evidence, but may never return to the country.

Ball for each was set at $2,500. The draftsman, who testified for the fourth consecutive day, identified himself as Christian Danielson, an employee of the Bath (Me.) Iron Works. He is a naturalized citizen, he said, but his three daughters live in Germany and he had property and money there. He was held in $10,000 bail.

Among the witnesses yesterday was an unidentified blonde woman, about 25—the sixth woman to be involved in the investigation; also two unidentified men.

There are now 10 material witnesses held in connection with the spy charges, pending against Gustave Rumrich, Eric Glaser, Johanna Hofmann and Otto Herman Voss.

CANOE TRIP AND PICNIC

A group of Bristolians enjoyed a canoe trip on the Rancocas Creek between Mt. Holly and Smithville, N. J., Memorial Day. A picnic was also enjoyed. The party was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hollenback. Those attending: the Misses Charlotte and Margaret Rathke, Irene and Violet Ruth Rancak, Margaret Stephenson, Elizabeth Fawcett, Dorothy Ritter, Edith Kershaw, Doris Mershon, Marion Walter, Mary Watson; Messrs. Charles Orr, Stanley Schell, Louis Worthington, Charles Doan, Jack Ritter, Harold Coon, Headley and William Warner.

MARRIAGE LICENSE BUSINESS ON INCREASE

144 Applications Received At Clerk of Orphans' Court Office in May

IS AN INCREASE OF 20%

DOYLESTOWN, June 4—One hundred and forty-four couples applied for licenses to wed during the month of May, according to the records in the office of the Clerk of Orphans' Court. This is an increase of 20 couples over last year and an increase of 20% over the first five months of 1937.

Sixty-eight percent of the applicants in May were non-residents of Bucks county, coming from Trenton, Philadelphia and smaller towns and cities in New Jersey. A very large percentage of the couples issued licenses in May were married by Justices of the Peace.

Twenty-nine occupations were represented among the licenses granted in May. The docket also shows that Bucks county brides applying for licenses are becoming younger and that they prefer husbands who are under 30. Seventeen brides were applying for licenses in May between 17 and 21 years of age.

Eight States were represented among the applicants for May marriage licenses, and the docket in the marriage license bureau shows that 13 male applicants and nine female applicants had been married before, 11 of that total being divorcees.

A survey of the marriage license docket for the first five months of 1938 indicates that the three-day marriage license law in operation in Pennsylvania, has not put a big crimp in the number of applicants coming to Bucks county. Non-resident applicants questioned as to why they come to Doylestown to get their license, state that they "just like to get out of town" and in most cases "they have heard a lot about Doylestown" and usually say, "let's go there."

Mrs. Lillian Hanscom, West Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnsell and son Charles, Philadelphia, were Sunday guests of William Davis, Cedar street.

BRISTOL RIDING CLUB OPENS TWO-DAY EVENT

Annual Spring Horse Show Gets Under Way On The Laing Estate

TO CONTINUE SUNDAY

The horse will be king this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon when the Bristol Riding Club will hold its annual spring horse show on the Laing Estate, Newport Road, Bristol Township, beginning at noon.

Two feature acts have been booked for Sunday afternoon, including Burt Northrup and his trained horse "Bess" and the Beatty Brothers, juvenile rodeo performers. Northrup will give a ten-minute performance tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock in front of St. Ann's club house, Wood and Franklin streets.

Tim, the brown gelding owned by Dr. E. J. Laing and ridden by that boy wonder, Carl Schilling, is entered for most of the jumping events for both days. This little horse has been a consistent winner at the leading horse shows this season, having scored wins at Atlantic City, Newark and Wilmington.

Hun Bun, the mare owned by Miss Peggy Budd, stabled at the Laing Estate and ridden by Carl Schilling, will also compete in most of the jumping classes. She was the standout horse at the recent Mount Holly horse show, winning six consecutive blue ribbons.

Judge James, the horse owned and named by Thomas Doran in honor of the popular Republican State Senatorial candidate, Howard I. James, Esq., will be another contestant from the Laing stables. Four years ago, under the name "Bad Blizzard," this horse was a feature attraction with the Sells-Floto circus, leaping over an automobile at each performance.

Frank Donnelly will show his reliable Buddy, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hanford have entered their colt, Good Friday, and are expecting great things from this beautiful horse. Unfortunately that marvel hunter, Over There, owned by the Hanfords, died last winter after 12 successful years and as a memorial they are presenting a trophy for the "Working Hunter" class which was usually won by Over There.

A horse, formerly owned by the Duponts and recently purchased by Andrea Lentini, is White Star, a beautiful Irish hunter that has a fine record and is being counted on to give a thrilling performance.

Prince, owned by Marty J. Green; Kalara, owned by Jack Gavigan, and White Boots and Lady Fleetwood, owned by Dr. E. J. Laing, are all entered in the show, which is expected to be the best the Bristol club has yet sponsored. Mr. and Mrs. Marty Green have also donated a trophy.

Arrangements of flowers to be used as a pattern for chintz, Mrs. T. B. Megargee, Mrs. Pitonka, Mrs. John J. Willaman.

Old fashioned arrangement of flowers in a pitcher, Mrs. Willaman, Mrs. Pitonka, Mrs. Kenneth Walton.

NEWPORTVILLE

Mrs. E. Babula and daughter Eileen, Philadelphia, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. F. Dowgwilo.

Mrs. Joseph McC Carson Dies; Ill For Brief Period

Mrs. Bessie C. McC Carson, wife of Joseph McC Carson, died at her home, 1238 Pond street, this morning after a brief illness. Mrs. McC Carson was born in Camden, N. J., where she resided most of her life. She moved to Bristol from Philadelphia 12 years ago.

She was an active member of the Bristol Travel Club, was chairman of the enrollment committee of the Red Cross for two years and was interested in welfare work of the town. Mrs. McC Carson is survived by her husband, Joseph McC Carson; one daughter, Mrs. James Jackson, Crafton; one son, Clement McC Carson, Bristol; and three grandchildren, Charles, James and Eleanor Jackson, of Crafton.

Relatives and friends, also members of the Bristol Travel Club, are invited to the funeral Monday at three o'clock from Murray's Funeral Home, 408 Cooper street, Camden, N. J. Interment will be in Evergreen Cemetery, Camden, N. J. Friends may call at her late residence Sunday evening seven to nine o'clock.

FREE BOY OF BLAME FOR FATAL SHOOTING OF COUSIN

Coroner's Jury Exonerates Edward F. Ash in Shooting of Robert W. Ash

ON A BENSALEM FARM

A 16-year old Philadelphia boy, Edward Francis Ash, 2215 Bridge street, was exonerated of all blame in the death of his cousin, Robert William Ash, by a Coroner's jury at the Municipal Building here yesterday afternoon.

After hearing the defendant's testimony and the story of the father of the deceased, who stated that it could not have been anything else but an accident, the jury freed the defendant.

The accident occurred early in the evening on May 20th in Bensalem Township on the farm of Willie Rosowski, Cornwells Heights. Testimony indicated that the cartridge clip had been removed from the gun as the defendant carried it toward the house, and in line with his friend and cousin, Robert Ash.

Bucks County detective Anthony Russo was the first witness called by Bucks County Coroner, Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, who presided at the inquest. Russo stated that he was called to Harriman Hospital and there saw Robert Ash in an unconscious condition with a bullet wound in his forehead. Russo talked to Edward Ash who was also present at the hospital, and to the father of the deceased. The father told Russo that he thought it was an accident and not intentional.

Robert Ash, Sr., 2215 Bridge street, was the next witness to testify and he stated that his boy and the defendant, who also lived at the same address, were very good friends and that the fatal shooting could not have been anything but an accident.

Deputy Coroner of Bucks County, Dr. James P. Lawler, stated that he was called to view the body at the Harriman Hospital and said that death had been due to rifle wound in the head.

The defendant, who was the same age as the friend he accidentally shot, said that he had never handled a gun before in his life and he thought the gun was empty after he had removed the cartridge clip. He demonstrated before the jury the way he carried the gun toward the house when he accidentally discharged. He said he had been target shooting in the woods.

The jury, which found that the deceased met his death as a result of an accidental discharge of a rifle carried by Edward Francis Ash, and which exonerated Edward Francis Ash of all blame, consisted of: John Y. Turner, foreman; Evan B. Vandegrift; Damon Jobson, Alexander Dougherty, Frank Green and John H. Gulick.

New Church Group To Hold First Service Here

Announcement is made of the formation of a new church group in Bristol which has adopted the name of "Calvary Baptist Church." The group will hold its first meeting for worship tomorrow morning in the building of the Christian Church of the Apostolic Faith, Walnut and Wood streets. Deacons have been chosen and temporary officers elected and services tomorrow will include morning worship, Sunday School and two services during the evening, including a meeting for young people.

Sunday school will convene tomorrow morning at 9.45 o'clock and the session will be held in the basement of the church. This service will be followed by morning worship at 11 o'clock.

Frank Hibbs, Morrisville, will be the guest speaker at the morning service as the church does not as yet have a pastor.

The evening service will be in the form of a young people's meeting and will convene at seven o'clock. This will be followed by a church service at eight o'clock when an illustrated Bible message will be given by Charles Ruth, Croydon.

The deacons of the new organization include: Charles Ruth, John Bauer, Sr., Croydon; Fred Bell, and Elwood Dyer, Bristol.

Temporary officers are: Doris Hendricks, Bristol Township, church clerk; Elwood Dyer, Bristol, treasurer.

The Sunday School organization is composed of the following:

Superintendent: John Bauer, Sr., Croydon; assistant superintendent, Clarence Smith, Bristol; secretary, John Tomlinson, Bristol; treasurer, John Poulette, Bristol Township; pianist, Miss Mildred Dyer, Bristol.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Just Another Million

WASHINGTON, June 2. THE stage has been reached in Washington where protests against useless expenditures mean literally nothing. To point out that there is no justification for an appropriation and that the agency for which it is asked serves no good purpose makes no impression whatever. The money is voted just the same.

AN instance occurred on Tuesday, when the Senate increased by $600,000 the House appropriation for the so-called "National Emergency Council," thus bringing the annual cost of that body above the million mark. Before this action was taken the Senate was told, not by Republican, but by Democratic Senators, that "the agency's activities are not worth a ten-cent piece," and that it is impossible to furnish a "single example" of anything worth while it had done in the five years of its existence.

THOUGH Administration Senators, as in duty bound, went to the defense of the council, no convincing reason was presented either for the increased appropriation or the continued existence of the body. Nor was there any real answer to the charge that it principally functions as a campaign-propaganda unit for the New Deal. Instead, the money was given without a roll call. Another half million went out the window, and the life of a perfectly useless and quite costly bureau is extended for another year.

LEGENDS REMAIN

Headlines during the last few days have been Airmail Links Alaska Cities, and Airmail Links Alaska Closer to the U. S. The first heralds the story of the mail plane hop from Juneau to Fairbanks, the second introduces the report of the first mail transportation from Alaska to San Francisco in which a part of the journey was made by air. Great progress is recorded in these stories, days are converted into minutes, mountains of ice into a wave of air. The magic wand of science brings one romantic era to an end and another into being. But the Alaska mail dog legends remain among the heroic tales of the making of America.

It was an epochal day in the life of Fred Milligan and his dogs, that May day when he let his mail team of sled dogs stay in their kennels while he climbed aboard a plane to go along on the inaugural flight which established regular mail service between dots on the icy wastes of Alaska and which officially wrote him on doing the job the way he and his dogs have been doing it for 30 years—carrying the mail lashed to sleds. It is true that for several years airplanes have been competing with dog sleds in certain sections of the territory, but setting up of the Juneau-Fairbanks service on a basis of a 4½-hour schedule each way on a flight distance of 700 miles over an ice-capped coastal range and the fabulous Yukon trail is the first carriage of airmail on regular schedule the year around.

The dog sled way is no more, but it will be years before the modern method will end the telling of stories of heroism of the Alaska mailmen and of the great-hearted animals, some of whom were nothing to look at but whose performance on the trail was beyond belief. There was Snookum, little on looks, but if you wanted a puller you wanted Snookum. There was Margie, a beautiful Malamute, a lady if there ever was one, who never failed to pull her weight. On the other hand, there was Oolika, the loveliest dog Nome had ever seen—and the laziest—always playing with a doll while the others worked, and there was Dubby, one of the greatest loose-leader huskies in all the history of the mail, fit to be the general of an army, leader of men and dogs, who found trails where no other could find them across 1,000 miles of drifted snow.

Progress is progress, but the dogs will not be forgotten so long as the last oldtime mail carrier is alive to tell of them.

We are all vain, and the man who gave Ford his first job at $4 a week probably says: "I made him what he is."

Some men succeed, and some have wives who think they are being good partners if they enjoy spending the money.

There are two classes of citizens: those who make a great fuss about things that can't be helped, and those who boss things.

How quickly the world would become a paradise if only reform began where charity does.

"Suppose you try it first" would seem the logical Czechoslovak reply to German demand that the formidable Czech army be taken away from the frontier and a peaceful atmosphere be restored.

OF COURSE, when it is considered that the total appropriations of this Congress will approximate the incredible sum of ten billions, the single million thrown away on the National Emergency Council seems trivial. The part that isn't trivial is the frame of mind of which it is indicative, both in the executive and the legislative branches of the Government. And it isn't even trivial in the concrete when the fact is grasped that this million is but one of many relatively small and equally useless appropriations, which, combined, form a really gigantic sum, wastefully spent without valid excuse or visible results.

IT would be reasonable to think that under existing circumstances the President and Congress alike would be eager and alert to save every dollar that could be saved at this time. It would seem that, faced with the necessity of greatly increased relief appropriations and determined upon another pump-priming program, the dangers of which he himself once solemnly warned, Mr. Roosevelt today would be militantly insisting upon retrenchment in every other governmental department and agency, big and little, in order to lessen the strain of providing these great sums for relief and public works.

THAT would appear not only logical but imperative. Nevertheless it is not being done. On the contrary, the pressure for economy in the departments has been relaxed. The word retrenchment is no longer heard anywhere in the Administration. Refusing to consider any other, the President not only holds on to the most political aswell as the most costly method of administering relief but even the economy gestures with which he was so prolific at the beginning of this session, are made no more. There were probably a number of Senators with friends on the N. E. C. pay roll but their increased appropriation went through not because there is any belief in the Senate as to the value of its "co-ordinating" work, nor because of any conviction that it needed more money, but solely because the additional amount had been asked for and the White House wanted it given.

IT WAS entirely typical of the complete irresponsibility of the period. It was an example of the casualness with which millions are tossed away upon the flimsiest pretexts. It demonstrates that not only the intent but the desire to economize has disappeared except among a handful of men powerless to stop the trend in an election year against an Executive with unrestricted control over vast lump sums. A Democratic Senator—Byrd, of Virginia—asserted some months ago that a hundred million dollars annually could be saved without cutting down relief or crippling a single useful governmental function. It is a conservative estimate. Yet, about to assume vast new burdens which will add to the debt and deepen the deficit, no effort is being made to save a dollar in any direction whatever—quite the reverse. It seems crazy—and it is.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD—Lights! Camera! Action! First day on M. G. M.'s

"Too Hot to Handle" is as exciting as the opening day at college. The set is buzzing with enthusiasm. Clark Gable, who plays a g-o-e-t-t-i-n-g newsreel man, is making the first shots.

Twenty Chinese girl "Big Apple" dancers have been rounded up for the scenes. While their routine is being set, Director Jack Conway and Clark chat with Myrna Loy, who plays Clark's daredevil flying aide, and Walter Pidgeon, who is cast as the rival.

The set is a playspot in Shanghai, just after the Japanese bombardment. The place is hung with lanterns, oriental pictures, a real Chinese swing orchestra, or what goes for swing over there, is supplying the music for the gals, whose usually straight national garb has been cut in sexy lines. Dancing with them are Chinese youths and a sprinkling of Chinese soldiers.

The girls go to town with just as much zip as their American sisters, but the boys seem to have difficulty getting that placid look off their faces and their bodies to wriggle.

Iris Wong, California born, but several years a resident of Shanghai, sets the pace. She has no difficulty with the orgiastic routines and pretty soon her spirit has infected them all.

One of Hollywood's longest continuous dialog takes is being shot when we arrive on the set of the new Astaire-Rogers picture, "Carefree". It clocks at two minutes and 34 seconds.

Fred, clad in natty morning clothes, is playing a psychiatrist. In his office is Ralph Bellamy, with an awful hang over. Ralph's in love with Ginger Rogers, who prefers a stage career. Astaire's job is to put Ginger through a course of psychoanalysis so she won't shy at the sound of wedding bells.

The scene opens with Fred, sitting on his examination table playing a mouth organ while Bellamy is led by "Doctor's Assistant" Jack Carson, around the office in an effort to sober up.

Every step is timed to music, to dialog, too. The lines are so cockeyed that the set crew burst into roars of laughter during rehearsal. The camera dollies around through every complicated step and bit of business.

It takes several rehearsals, but when the real take comes, the crew stifles its giggles and dead silence reigns except for the actors and the harmonica.

Through the whole two minutes and 34 seconds, the trio play their intricate business and lines and at the finish Director Mark Sandrich announces with a triumphant grin, "It's a beauty!"

Out at Twentieth Century-Fox, the studio has turned over its big special of the year to Allan Dwan, master of spectacular atmosphere drama.

It is "Suez", in which Tyrone Power plays De Lesseps, builder of the canal. Loretta Young is the beauty who later becomes Empress Eugenie. Louis Napoleon is played by Leon Ames.

The set is a magnificent sweep. Next to the salon where the scene is being played is a great reception hall, done in France's most ornate period. Wide stairways lead into the grand ballroom. Director Dwan has arranged his sets so the camera can take it all in with one grand sweep.

In front of the camera, Power has taken the place of a Swami, who is entering Louis Napoleon's guests telling fortunes in a dish of sand. Tyrone puts his fingers through the sand, prophesies that the president one day will trail French tricolor in the mire and proclaim himself emperor.

The gay laughter of Loretta Young and Rudolph Schildkraut, who plays De Lesseps' friend, is suddenly broken when the president suddenly walks in, overhears the prophecy and stands regally under the giant crystal chandelier to say icily, "Very amusing!"

But what Tyrone Power couldn't forget happens right after this. While being shifted for a better light effect, one of the heavy rector tripods tumbles over, falls directly across the table. It misses Schildkraut's head, lands on his shoulder. He takes it stoically, like an aristocrat. But one inch would have landed it on his head, him in the hospital and the production schedule on the wrong side of the time table.

CHAPTER XXVIII

"We'll get down to the offices now," the Superintendent said and, with an elephantine tread, led the way downstairs again.

They all had torches and began a rapid search through the clerk's desks and papers. It was impossible to examine them all in so short a time but the police officers made various notes of invoices, addresses, and dates of correspondence, without coming across a single item which tied up the place with its illegal source of supply.

Gregory wandered into the inner room. If there were any, it was there, he felt certain, that important papers would be kept.

The lock expert had already opened the roll-top desk and the Superintendent had gone carefully through it without finding any papers other than those connected with apparently legitimate business. Gregory stared round the place, scrutinizing the miscellaneous collection of samples and trade papers, hoping for inspiration. Then his eye fell upon the lower shelf of the bookcase.

Half-buried under stacks of dusty documents there were a long row of books. He bent down and flashed his torch on them. It was a set of Shakespeare's works in forty volumes. Each contained one of Shakespeare's thirty-seven plays, except the last three, which were devoted to the sonnets and poems.

He stared at them for a moment, thinking how queer it was that the owner of this grim business office should be sufficiently interested in Shakespeare to keep a set in his depressing work room. Then he noticed that whereas the tops of thirty-nine volumes were gray with dust, the fortieth, number sixteen in the set, was comparatively clean and stood out a little from the others as though it had been recently used and hastily put back.

"When you are ready," he said to the Superintendent who was standing in the doorway, "we'll quit. I don't think you'll find much here but, if you'll provide me with a copy of 'The Tempest,' I think I'll be able to decode that famous telegram for you."

At Scotland Yard Gregory settled down in the Superintendent's room with a thin paper edition of Shakespeare's plays, a pencil and some blank sheets of foolscap. He spread out the telegram before him and read it:

COROT CAFE DE LA CLOCHE CALAIS SIXTH 41 44 11 15 THENCE 46 SEVENTH 43 47 EIGHTH 43 AGAIN 47 ROGERS.

Turning to the play he looked up line 41, which read:

"... drown? Have you a mind to sink?"

Then line 44: "Work you then."

Next, line 11: which had only the single word: "Enough!"

Line 15 was, "Where is the master, boatswain?"

And line 46: "... Noise-maker. We are less afraid to be drowned than..."

It simply did not make sense so he tried another method. This did not seem to make sense either, so for a quarter of an hour, he worked on all sorts of other possibilities: trying out the numbers against full speeches or as lines in various acts and scenes, but none of them gave any results until it occurred to him to try the songs of the fairy Ariel.

There were four songs in the play and Gregory wrote them down.

1. Act I, scene II

1. Come unto these yellow sands,

2. And then take hands:

3. Curtsied when you have and kisses'd

4. The wild waves whistle:

5. Foot it feathery here and there;

6. And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.

7. Hark, hark!

8. Bow-wow.

9. The watch-dogs bark;

10. Bow-wow.

11. Hark, hark! I hear

12. The strain of strutting chanticleer.

13. Cry, cock-a-diddle-dow.

2. Act I, scene II

1. Full fathom five they father lies;

2. Of his bones are coral made;

3. Those are pearls that were his eyes;

4. Nothing of him that doth fade,

5. But doth suffer a sea-change

6. Into something rich and strange

7. Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell.

8. Ding-dong.

9. Hark! now I hear them—Ding-dong, bell.

3. Act II, scene I

1. While you here do snoring lie,

2. Open-eyed conspiracy

3. His time doth take.

4. If of life you keep a care,

5. Shake off slumber, and beware:

6. Awake, awake!

4. Act V, scene I

1. Where the bee sucks there suck I:

2. In a cowslip's bell I lie;

3. There do crouch when owls do cry.

4. On the bats back I do fly

5. After summer, merrily.

6. Merrily, merrily shall I live now.

7. Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

On taking out the lines, in accordance with the numbers in the telegram, he arrived at the following: (Song 4, line 1):

"Where the bee sucks, there suck I."

(Song 4, line 4):

"On the bat's wing I do fly."

(Song 1, line 1):

"Unto those yellow sands."

(Song 1, line 5):

"Foot it feathery here and there."

(Song 4, line 6):

"Merrily, merrily shall I live now."

(Song 4, line 3):

"Where owls do cry."

(Song 4, line 7):

"Under the blossom that hangs on the bough."

(Song 4, line 3):

"Where owls do cry."

(Song 4, line 7):

"Under the blossom that hangs on the bough."

This little collection seemed by far the most hopeful he had achieved yet. There was a reference to "yellow sands" and another to "owls," which suggested the Brown Owl Inn. The words "foot it feathery" too immediately conjured up in his mind a vision of long dancing limbs clad in silk stockings.

Bearing in mind that the first four lines referred to the SIXTH of August, when he had witnessed the smugglers' operations at Calais, he went over them again. "Where the bee sucks, there suck I" seemed to suggest the depot at Calais, from which the smugglers drew their supplies. He did not know where they had landed on that occasion, but now that he was acutely conscious of the vast stretch of golden sands at Pegwell Bay, and their base a little way inland from it at Ash Level, it looked as though that was the spot where the smugglers had dropped their cargo on the night of the SIXTH.

Going on to the SEVENTH, the Brown Owl Inn on Romney Marshes was plainly indicated, as he knew that they had landed there that night, and the repetition of it for the EIGHTH, when they had landed there again, confirmed his guess.

He was puzzled for a moment about the line "Under the blossom that hangs on the bough" but, in view of the fact that they had discovered tobacco in Mithloom & Allison's warehouse, he soon decided that the inference must be to leave, and that both the cargoes he had seen landed at Romney on the two previous nights were shipments of tobacco. When he had finally re-drafted the telegram on these assumptions, it read:

COROT CAFE DE LA CLOCHE CALAIS SIXTH I AM COLLECTING SUPPLIES FROM OUR BASE AT CALAIS. THEY WILL BE DISPATCHED BY PLANE TO PEGWELL BAY AND THE FREIGHT ON THIS OCCASION WILL BE A CONSIGNMENT OF SILKS. THENCE I SHALL PROCEED TO THE CARLTON AND ON THE SEVENTH A FURTHER CONSIGNMENT WILL BE LANDED AT THE BROWN OWL INN ON ROMNEY MARSHES CONSISTING OF TOBACCO ON THE EIGHTH THE LAST OPERATION WILL BE REPEATED AND WE SHALL LAND AT THE BROWN OWL INN AGAIN WITH A FURTHER CARGO OF TOBACCO.

ROGERS. "There you are," he pushed it over to Wells and the Superintendent, "that all fits in, doesn't it?"

The Superintendent nodded. "Unfortunately, though, this telegram only carries us up to the night of the eighth and it's already the ninth, or rather the morning of the tenth I should say now, so we're stuck again. Otherwise, if I could only catch them red-handed landing a cargo I'd bring them in, now we've got on to Quex Park, Ash Level, Romney Marshes, Calais and at least one of their London Depots."

"Yes, we're at a bit of a dead end now," Gregory confessed, "and the new moon's due in two days' time. They'll stop operations then until the dark period in September, unless I'm much mistaken. I've a hunch, though, they'll put another lot of stuff over tonight and on the night of the eleventh, so if you get your people to cover their three known landing grounds you ought to be able to catch them at it and capture their fleet tonight or tomorrow night."

"Well, I'm for bed," said the Superintendent. "I was up all night last night chasing down into Kent. I think we'd best meet again here and talk things over later in the morning. How will eleven o'clock suit you?"

"Fine," Gregory agreed. "I got in a good sleep today at Ramsgate, but my chest's still pretty painful from the gruelling I had with that life line, so a few hours in bed wouldn't do me any harm."

A taxi carried Gregory swiftly through the deserted streets to Kensington. It was just four o'clock as he wearily mounted the stairs to his rooms. He mixed himself a badly needed whiskey and soda, threw off his coat, and drank it slowly.

His thoughts had turned to Sabine. The police net was closing upon Lord Gavin's organization. She was still at Quex Park, sleeping all unperturbed and unconscious, no doubt, of the approaching danger. By telephoning Sir Pellinore on the previous night she had undoubtedly saved the lives of Wells and himself, but how much would the police let that weigh in her favor when they came to pull her in as one of the gang?

The police would have to charge her. They couldn't avoid doing that; and when she came before a court she would certainly be sentenced. Somehow or other he had to save her from that.

He opened the door of his bedroom. The light behind him was enough for him to see his bed. Upon it, stretched out on the eiderdown, her head buried in the pillows, and sleeping as soundly as a little child, was Sabine.

Gregory paused there in the doorway staring at her. Then, as though feeling his presence in her sleep, she stirred and, as he stepped forward, her eyes opened.

"So you are here—at last." She raised herself on one elbow. "I thought that you would never come and I was so tired I dropped off to sleep."

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

An exciting new "Bulldog Drummond" drama, played by a cast which might well be called the "Rose Bowl team" of mystery pictures, by virtue of its performances in a long line of "Drummond" stories, opens today at the Bristol Theatre, in "Bulldog Drummond's Peril," featuring John Barrymore, John Howard and Louise Campbell.

H. C. (Sapper) McNeill has written a gripping tale based on the discovery, by a great English chemist, of a way to make perfect diamonds synthetically in his laboratory, and the subsequent war waged upon him and his friends by the world's most powerful diamond syndicate.

A romance between a handsome young aviator, whose airplane is wrecked on a lonely South Sea island, and an untamed native girl, who has never before laid eyes on a white man, forms the story of "Her Jungle Love," showing tomorrow at the Bristol the new Paramount Technicolor production.

Ray Milland and Dorothy Lamour head the cast, making their first appearance together since "Jungle Princess," in which they scored so sensationally a season ago. Probably no two stars in Hollywood are more of ten associated with tropical romance than Milland and Miss Lamour, he having recently appeared in "Ebb Tide" and she in "Hurricane." In "Her Jungle Love" they are assisted by a cast of popular players, including Lynne Overman, who wisecracked his way through "Night Club Scandal."

DICK'S HOME-RUN HIT WINS FOR ODD FELLOWS

In one of the best Bristol Twilight League games played this season, the Odd Fellows, thanks to a home run by Johnny Dick, nosed out the Rohm and Haas nine, 2-1, last evening on the Edgely diamond.

Dick's blow was a climax to a wonderful hurling match between M.H. Jones and Eddie Sullivan. The blow came in the fifth inning. Hal Snyder had led off with a single past third base. Jones sacrificed him to second. Dick then socked a long fly to left which escaped Brunner's outstretched hand and before the ball could be retrieved Dick had circled the bases.

Five hits was the best the winning team could muster off the southpaw slants of Sullivan. But the chemical mixers had more difficulty in solving the old man of the Bristol Twilight League, Jones. The veteran of the loop gave up four hits and would have had a shut out for two disastrous errors in the first.

The mis-plays gave the Rohm and Haas team its only marker. G. Ritter got on via an error by Cooper. Dougherty and Brunner whiffed. Massilia reached base safely when F. Hibbs dropped Jones' throw of his roller. A passed ball counted G. Ritter. Cahall was an easy out.

Three double-plays were made in the first three innings. The Odd Fellows made one in the second after W. Ritter doubled and Andy lined to Johnny Dick. The Maple Beach team had two. One in the first when Dick was doubled up on a 1-5-5-3 twin-killing and another on a force at third and Cahall's throw to G. Ritter with two runners on base in the second.

BRISTOL AND LANGHORNE TO PLAY FOR LEAGUE TITLE

The play-off for the championship of the lower division of the Lower Bucks County Baseball League will take place Monday afternoon at three o'clock. Although the exact site has not as yet been definitely settled, negotiations are being made at the present time to secure the Edgely diamond which is suitable to Langhorne and of course Bristol. If arrangements cannot be made to secure this field, then the scene will be shifted to Bensalem High School's field, which is the only other suitable mutual field for both schools.

There will be only one game for the title, which means that the winner in this tilt will earn the right to meet the Buckingham Buccaneers, the champions of the upper section of the Lower Bucks circuit, for the crown, over the entire league. Last year, when Newtown and Bristol shared the loop lead at the close of the campaign, a three-game series was arranged. However, due to the lateness of the season, there could be only one game for the title this year. Therefore, both teams will be on the spot. This should indicate heads-up baseball, another typical Langhorne-Bristol pitchers' duel, and strategy on the part of each team in the fight for the title.

It has been a mighty long time since Langhorne High has copped the honors in this section of the Lower Bucks league—much too long, in fact. So they are hoping that this will be their year, that fate will smile upon them for a change. On the other hand, the Cardinals, having taken the title last year, are entertaining the desire to repeat that triumph again this season.

DOUGHERTY SCORES THREE OF TEAM'S FOUR RUNS

With Gige Dougherty leading the scoring attack, the St. Ann's team had a real close shave with the Grundy team last evening on the Grundy diamond but two runs in the final inning gave the Wood Street boys the victory with the final tabulations being 4-2.

Dougherty stepped to the plate three times and each time he reached base and scored to be responsible for three of the four tallies. However, it was again the lanky Charlie Hughes who furnished the winning blow. With the count deadlocked at 2-all in the fifth, Hughes stepped to the plate to find Dougherty and Heftman on because of singles. He immediately stepped to the plate and scored with the winning markers. Pat McGahan, St. Ann's orthodox thrower, gave the Grundy team five hits but they were well scattered. The losing hurler was Ralph Narcisi who pitched his usual good brand of ball but his own wildness plus his own error in the first aided his downfall.

Joe Antonelli played a nice fielding game for the losers while St. Ann's star on the defense was Joey Heftman.

Last night, St. Ann's released Pete Firce and signed Eddie Roe.

LIKELY TO MATCH SHULL WITH "HOKEY" LEIGHTON

It is most likely that "Hokey" Leighton, Croydon glover who fights under the colors of the Bucks County Rescue Squad, will be matched with George Shull, Burlington youngster, who represents Pen-Mar, at the amateur boxing show to be held in the St. Ann's Arena, Monday night.

Leighton is considered an appropriate foe for Shull, who is making a reputation for himself in the amateur circles. Leighton also has a record to be proud of, and last season won nine consecutive fights before he was beaten by Danny Murray. Since then, Leighton has won his last six fights, and is out to better his last season's record.

Those fans who braved the cold weather to witness last week's bouts, know what to expect for this week, as the bouts being booked are worth a wind-up on any fight card. Fans who attend this Monday night will not be disappointed by Match-Maker Johnny Straffe's card.

Straffe is doing his utmost to book the local southpaw, Vince Della, for a match. Philadelphians, knowing the dynamite left possessed by the St. Ann's fighter, are evading him, although Straffe may make some kind of an agreement, guaranteeing Della to fight at some other club at a future date.

Russ Pearson, the Langhorne colored boy who made good last week, will again be on the card, and so will his buddy, Francis Johnson. It will be Johnson's first fight and he will be as anxious to win as Pearson was to score his two-round knockout on the last card.

Tickets will go on sale over the week-end, and those wishing reserved seats are requested to order them now. Reservations can be secured by phoning the St. Ann's club-house, 9934.

Beantown Base Bandit

By BURNLEY

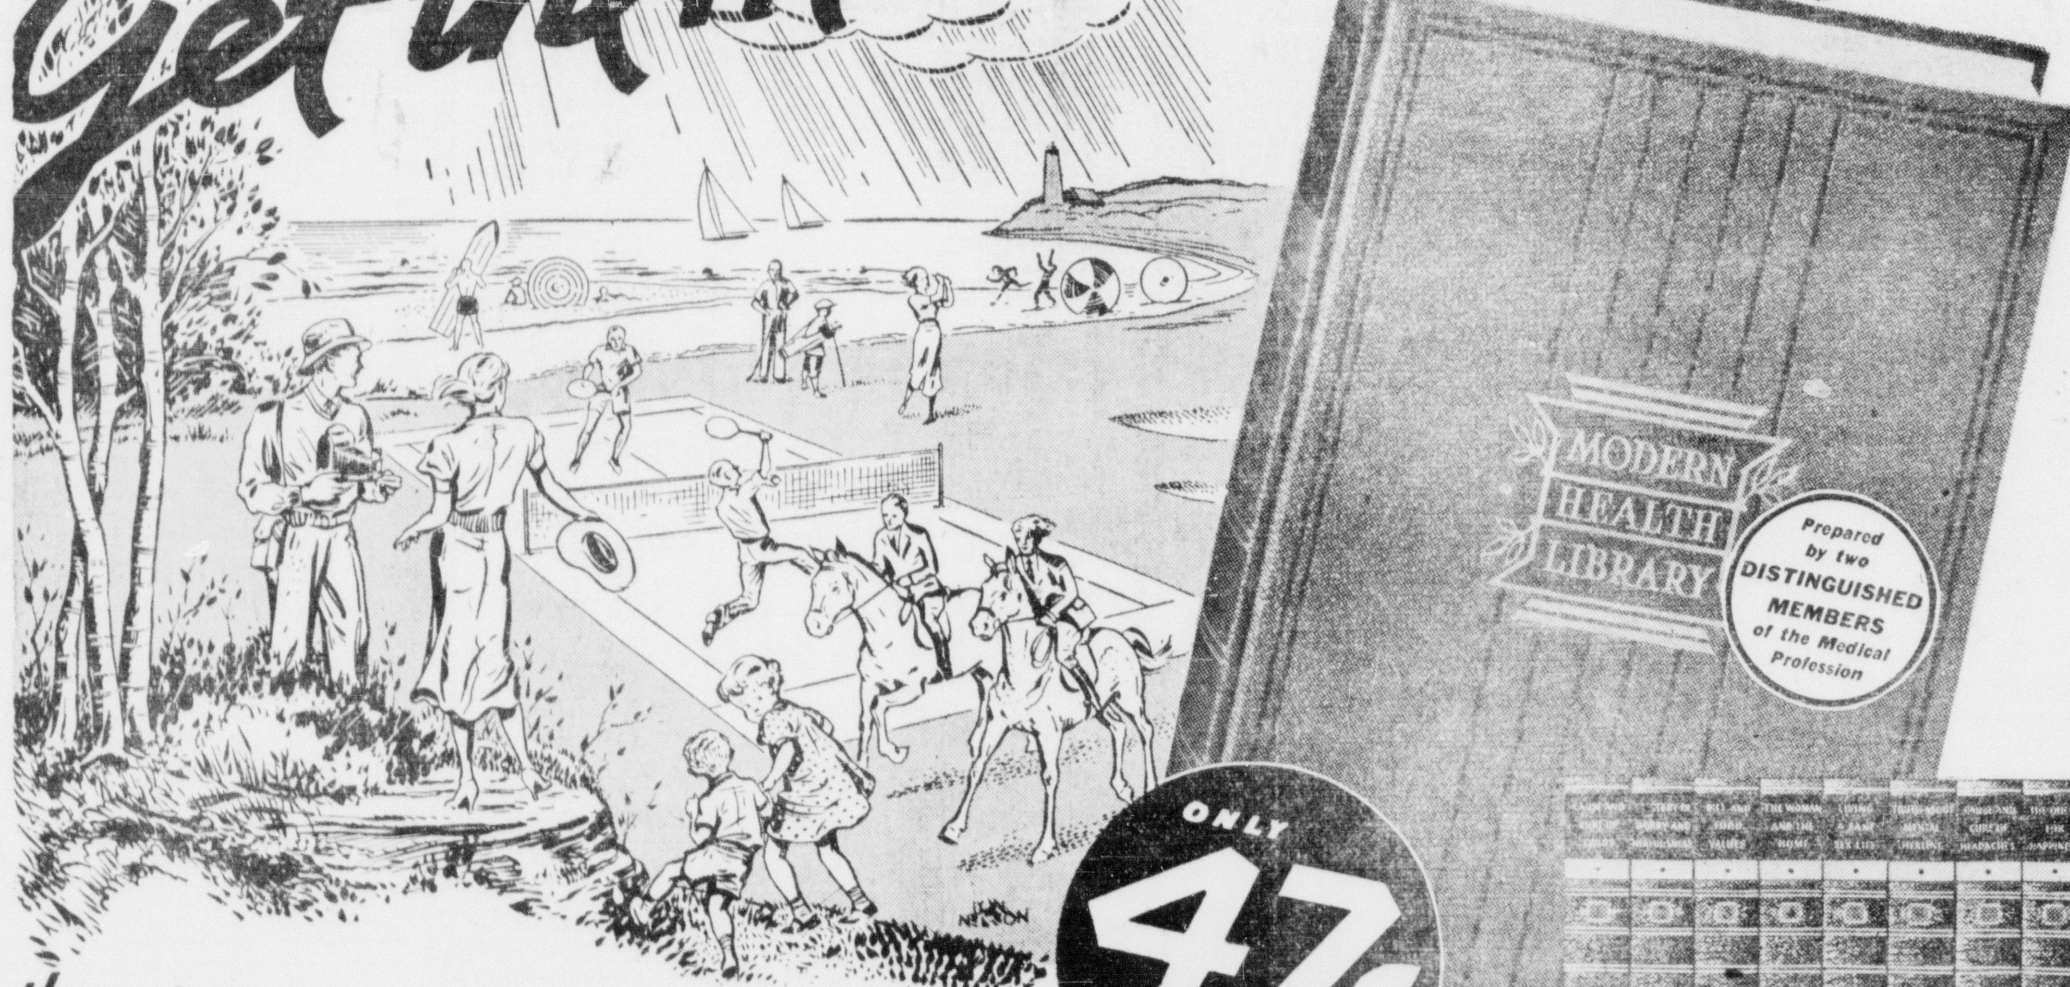

Boston's Ben Chapman is one ball player who yearns for the good old days. Not that Benjamin is one of baseball's greybeards—far from it. What Ben dislikes about the modern style of play is the emphasis on slugging, and the neglect of the fine art of base running and bag pilfering. For Chapman is a throwback to the days of Ty Cobb, the most daring of all base bandits. Cobb's amazing antics on the base paths thrilled the fans of yesteryear just as a home run by a Ruth or DiMaggio excited the adherents of the lively ball.

The Red Sox speedster is rated by those in the know as the best bag thief since the brilliant Max Carey; but Ben's talents are largely wasted in these days of extra base knocks and base hit barrages. Chapman bemoans the fact that few big league clubs ever have sliding pits in their training camps. The technique of base legeron will soon become a forgotten art, lost in the limbo of pre-Ruthian memories.

It is Chapman's idea that bases are stolen on the pitcher rather than the receiver. Although a catcher may occasionally uncork a bad peg to the base, the runner can't afford to take that possibility into account. He must get the jump on the hurler, for a quick start is all important in successful pillow pilfering. At least, that is Ben's formula, and he should know. HOW TO Get the Most out of Life

Happiness, the goal for which we are all striving, has its foundation so firmly and deeply rooted in physical health, that health is absolutely essential to its realization. Our habits of living, the manner in which we cooperate with the laws of hygiene — both mental and physical — have a powerful influence in determining the health we may enjoy, and hence, the happiness that we experience.

THE MIRROR OF LIFE

We must not overlook the fact that healthy emotions, the mainsprings of happiness, have a physical basis. We cannot expect to have healthy emotions with anything less than a healthy mind and body. The body is the mechanism for receiving and transmitting to the brain the ancestors of our thoughts and sentiments, and it is our highest duty to keep this transmitting mechanism in the best possible condition.

THE AUTHORS

WILLIAM S. SADLER, M.D.,
and LENA K. SADLER, M.D.

These authors were pioneers in the popularization of scientific medicine—the presentation of the facts of mental and physical hygiene to the public. They are teachers and writers of wide experience, having the authors of more than 100 books on health and hygiene. They bring to this work a rare proficiency in the use of scientific methods. The authors are members of the leading medical and scientific bodies of this country.

Can You Answer These Questions?

What should I teach my children about sex and when should I do it?
Is there a better way to plan the family budget?
What influence does correct weight have on health, happiness, and efficiency?
What would an understanding of food values, vitamins, calories mean to me in health and happiness?
What are the bad results of worry and how can I stop it?
What can I do to make home so attractive that my husband and children will think it's the best place on earth?
Is it possible for modern men and women to be really happy?
What recent discoveries of medical science will help me attain mental and physical well-being?
Is it possible to live a sane sex life in this modern sex-crazy world?
How can I be a real mother to my children without overdoing it?

YOU STILL HAVE PLENTY OF TIME

To get your set of the MODERN HEALTH LIBRARY. We will continue to print the numbered certificates on page one of each daily issue. By saving these differently numbered certificates each day (six consecutively numbered, for each volume) you can secure your set on a volume-a-week basis. If you have delayed in starting your Health Library don't put it off another day. Turn now to page one and tear out the first certificate. When you have six, consecutively numbered, present them at the Courier office, together with 47c (for each volume). Do this each week for eight weeks and you'll be the proud owner of the most reliable, modern, Health Library money can buy—and it costs you only a few pennies each week.

"THE QUEST FOR HAPPINESS"

Are you missing the biggest things in life? Why is it that some of us are happy and others unhappy? We strive for success, for money, for the good opinion of our fellows — because we hope to find happiness in these things. Yet how often does the realization of our highest ambition fail to bring us the happiness we expected.

JUST WHAT IS HAPPINESS?

How often fame turns out to be a bubble — how often the dream of romance is over-shadowed by the stern realities of married life. The fact is that happiness cannot come from without. It must come from within. If you are unhappy it is because something is wrong inside. It may be "nerves" — some wrong habit of thinking — something very small in itself. Yet once it is removed the whole complexion of your life is changed.

YOUR REAL SELF

If you have been shy, self-conscious, diffident about meeting people, you may suddenly find yourself popular, admired, surrounded by a host of eager friends. If you have been possessed of the devil "I can't", you may surprise yourself by striking out and accomplishing things. Or, if your home life has not been as happy as you might wish, you may suddenly discover that the trouble was really imaginary.

THE QUEST FOR HAPPINESS is a sound, livable, practical guide to right living. It brings a feeling of solid security in this topsy-turvy world.
